FINAL PRESENTATION
THE GUIDELINE OF CROSS EVALUATION

1. Each group must follow the given link to the Cross Evaluation Google Form
2. Each group has to perform the cross evaluation to the assigned groups (See Table 1)
3. Select your Group
4. Select Presenter Group. Remember to only select the 10 groups you need to evaluate (See Table 1)

Table 1. Groups to evaluate

5. Give the score to the Presenter Group with the score you think they deserve.
You only allowed giving : 1. Grade C; $0 < C \leq 2$ groups (grade C for 1 or 2 presenter groups)
2. Grade B; $6 \leq B < 8$ groups (grade B minimum to 6 presenter groups)
3. Grade A; $0 < A \leq 2$ groups (grade A for 1 to 2 presenter groups)

Correct Evaluation: two A given, six B given, and two C given.

YOUR GROUP NUMBER	GROUPS YOU NEED TO EVALUATE
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11
Grade	A	A	B	B	B	B	B	B	C	C

Correct Evaluation: one A given, eight B given, one C given

YOUR GROUP NUMBER	GROUPS YOU NEED TO EVALUATE
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11
Grade	A	B	B	B	B	B	B	B	B	C

Wrong Evaluation: three A given, four B given, three C given

YOUR GROUP NUMBER	GROUPS YOU NEED TO EVALUATE
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11
Grade	A	A	A	B	B	B	B	C	C	C

Wrong Evaluation: no A given, eight B given, two C given

YOUR GROUP NUMBER	GROUPS YOU NEED TO EVALUATE
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11
Grade	B	B	B	B	B	B	B	B	C	C

6. Give your positive comments to each presenter group.

- Write down things that impressed you, such as:
 - A. The way the problem definition, methodology, conclusion, etc, explained is very clear.
 - B. The novelty of the topic.
 - C. The presenter group might provide you the extra way to make their video even better, such as: put down the caption, using the laser pointer, put down some animations, etc.
 - D. The way the presenter speaks.
- Each point mentioned above (A, B, C, and D) should be written in details and constructive. Here some examples:
 - o "In Page 3, the problem definition stated clearly. At this point we all know that the problem the presenter raised is about the building a model to detect some different defects in fabric products"
 - o "The way the presenter speaks is very clear and fluent, which make it even easier to understand. The presenter also used the laser pointer in the PPT to highlight things he explained"

Note: If you give a presenter group with Grade A, you must write the positive comments in more detail compared to other groups who received B or C.

7. Give your critics to each presenter group.

- Write down things that that the presentation might lack of, such as:
 - E. The lack of novelty.
 - F. Unclear explanation in the content of the presentation
 - G. Incorrect explanation or definition

- Each point mentioned above (E, F, and G) should be written in details and constructive.
Here some examples:

- “The presenter didn’t explain the data he collected and the method he used to preprocess the data in page 3 and 4. It leaves the audience clueless about the big picture of this project. Too many missing pieces.
- “The way presenter explained the architecture of the NN in Page 4 seems to be imprecise.”
- “The overall explanation of this work needs to be improved. At one side, it’s very hard to follow the presenter explanation, since he’s not using any pointer on screen with a lot of words, and numbers he presented.”

Note: If you give a presenter group with Grade C, you must write the critics in more detail compared to other groups who received B or A

8. Avoid to give a presenter group an INVALID COMMENTS or NON-CONSTRUCTIVE COMMENTS for both positive comments and critics. See below
 - i. In this case, you give A to a presenter group, but the way you put the positive comment is neither constructive nor detail:
 - “Good”
 - “Interesting”
 - “clear explanation”
 - ii. In this case, you give C to a presenter group, but the way you put the critic is neither constructive nor detail.
For example:
 - “Not interesting”
 - “x”
 - “The topic is too boring”
 - “Nothing”
 - “The description is not clear”
9. Groups who give invalid comments will get their points deducted.
10. Groups who feel the grade/comment they receive is unfair will be allowed to make a report to the TA before Apr 12th. However, if the reported unfair comments are valid, TA will not deduct the group who gave the grade.
